Christ's Resurrection brings hope amid 'Easter of War,' pope says
The joy of Christ’s resurrection is needed now more than ever in a time when war in Ukraine and other parts of the world makes the hope for peace seem like an illusion, Pope Francis said before giving his Easter blessing.

Like the disciples who were at first doubtful of Jesus rising from the dead, “our eyes, too, are incredulous on this Easter of war,” the pope said as he prepared April 17 to give his Easter blessing “urbi et orbi” (“to the city and the world”).

“We have seen all too much blood, all too much violence. Our hearts, too, have been filled with fear and anguish, as so many of our brothers and sisters have had to lock themselves away in order to be safe from bombing,” he said.

Nevertheless, Christ’s victory over death “is not an illusion” and the world needs “the crucified and risen Lord so that we can believe in the victory of love, and hope for reconciliation.”
More than 100 people join Catholic Church in parishes across the Diocese at Easter Vigil

During his Easter homily, the Most Reverend Joseph C. Bambera, Bishop of Scranton, acknowledged all of the people who joined the church during the Easter Vigil at parishes across the Diocese of Scranton.

"Join with me in giving thanks for 107 catechumens and candidates, who, despite the challenges of these past years, listened to the voice of the risen Lord speaking to their hearts and said yes to God’s invitation to be baptized and received into full communion in the Catholic Church. How blest we are by their presence and commitment to journey with us in faith," the bishop said.

The bishop also spoke about hope, especially after dealing with several years of the COVID-19 pandemic and most recently with the world being impacted by the War in Ukraine.

"This moment, more than any other in our recent history, reminds us of our desperate need for a savior who will lift us from the brokenness of our world and save us from ourselves! This moment, brothers and sisters, is why we celebrate Easter," the bishop explained.

Pope Francis and the Vatican are urging world leaders to listen to the people’s cry for peace, and they have backed an appeal by the head of the United Nations for an Easter truce in Ukraine.

Pope Francis first called for an Easter truce during his Angelus address at the Vatican April 10.

“Let the weapons be put down,” he said on Palm Sunday. “Let the Easter truce begin. But not to provide more weapons and pick up the combat again — no! — a truce that will lead to peace, through real negotiation that is even disposed to some sacrifice for the good of the people. In fact, what victory is there in planting a flag on a pile of rubble?”

U.N. Secretary-General António Guterres echoed the appeal of the pope and other European Catholic and Protestant leaders for an Easter ceasefire.
Speaking to reporters April 20 at the U.N. headquarters in New York, Guterres asked there be a four-day “humanitarian pause” from April 21 to April 24, which is Holy Week and Easter on the Julian calendar, used by most Christians in Ukraine and Russia.

Light of risen Christ dispels darkness of fear, pope tells young people

Young people should not allow the darkness of fear to overwhelm them and instead allow the light of Easter to illuminate their lives and give them courage, Pope Francis said.

Fears “must be brought to light. And when fears, which are in darkness, come into the light, the truth bursts out. Do not be discouraged: If you are afraid, put it to the light and it will do you good!” the pope told thousands of young men and women gathered in St. Peter’s Square.
The April 18 event, titled “Seguimi” (“Follow Me”), was organized by the Italian bishops’ conference and brought young teens from all of Italy for a prayer vigil in Rome. While initial projections expected 57,000 people at the event, the Vatican said an estimated 100,000 young people were present.

It was the first large-scale gathering of its kind in St. Peter’s Square since the COVID-19 pandemic shuttered all public events in the country in 2020.
