'Root yourself in Jesus' life and love,' Deacon Michael Boris told at Ordination Mass

Just minutes before being ordained a Deacon – as Michael J. Boris laid on the floor of the Cathedral of Saint Peter – five words from the Litany of Supplication really caught his attention.

As the crowd of several hundred prayed to all of the saints, asking for God's blessing on the Dallas native, Boris said he was struck by the words: "Lord, deliver us we pray." "I found myself really saying that from the heart. I think it was the spirit speaking within me to say, Lord, deliver us so that we may experience the Joy of the Gospel, deliver us from our failings and our fears," Boris said in an interview with The Catholic Light directly following his Ordination Mass.

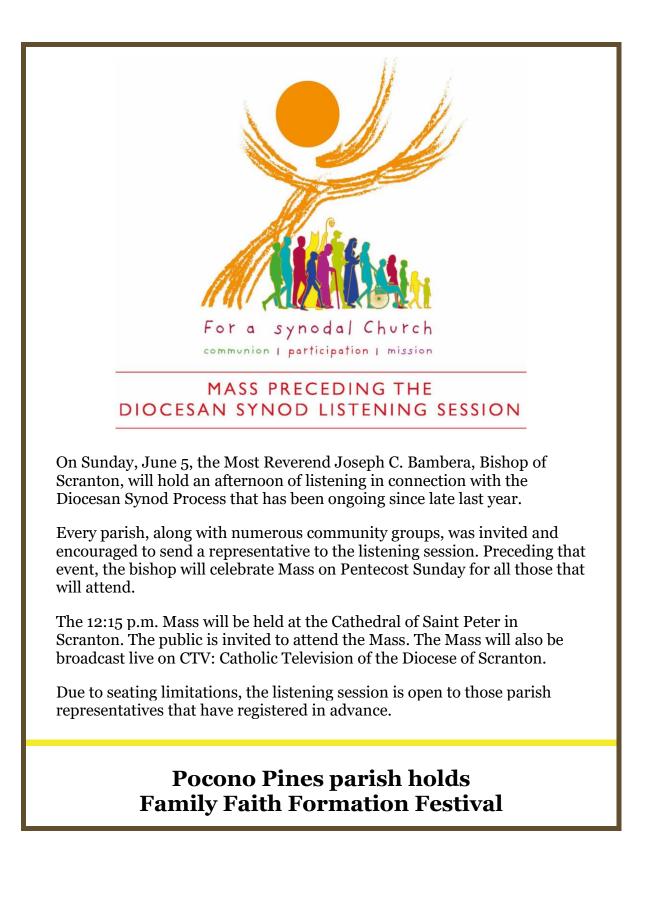

Boris, 26, was ordained as a transitional deacon on May 28, 2022, the ordination serving as the last major step before ordination to the priesthood, which typically occurs a year later after additional pastoral, liturgical and educational preparation.

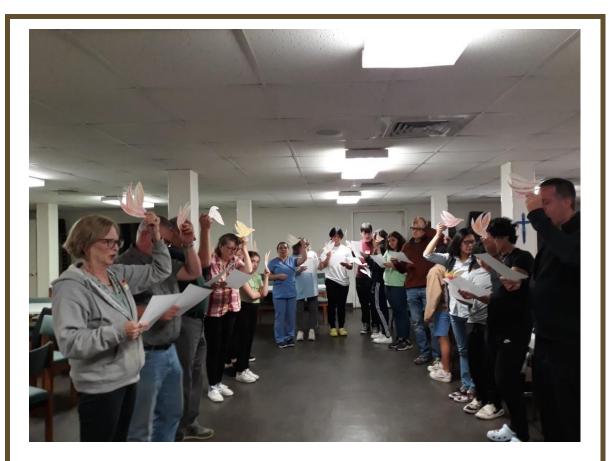

"It really does feel unreal, I know it's cliché to say that, but it is such a simple moment when the bishop lays his hands on your head and says the Prayer of Ordination. The Holy Spirit is working in powerful ways and I'm trusting that," he added.

Bishop Bambera to celebrate Sunday Mass on Pentecost prior to Diocesan Synod Listening Session

Members of Saint Maximilian Kolbe Parish in Pocono Pines, demonstrate the gift of tongues given by Jesus to the Apostles at Pentecost.

This was done by holding a Holy Spirit craft above their heads and reading the Lord's Prayer in many languages all at once. Those languages included Polish, Spanish, French, Philippine, Latin, Chinese, Japanese, Russian and Vietnamese.

The "Faith on Fire" reading took place during the parish's Family Faith Formation Festival, held on Wednesday, May 18, in which Father Sean Carpenter, pastor, invited families to participate in activities, crafts, prayer and fellowship.

"They saw what seemed to be tongues of fire that separated and came to rest on each of them. All of them were filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues as the spirit enabled them." Acts 2: 3-4

San Diego bishop says he was 'stunned,' humbled' by being named a cardinal

Cardinal-designate Robert W. McElroy told reporters May 31 that when he learned he is among the 21 new cardinals Pope Francis will create Aug. 27, "I said a big prayer."

"I said several prayers because I was stunned and so shocked by this," said the 68-year-old prelate who heads the San Diego Diocese. He is the only American in the group the pope announced May 29.

"It was prayer in gratitude for my family and the many people who have helped form me over the years and thanksgiving to God for all their roles in my life," he said during a 25-minute news conference held outside the diocesan pastoral center.

After the consistory, he will be among 132 cardinals under the age of 80, who will be eligible to vote in a conclave. The number of those over 80 will be 97, bringing the total number of cardinals to 229.

Shame on those who take advantage of the elderly, ill, pope says

Old age, frailty and vulnerabilities should not be hidden, Pope Francis said.

"We are all tempted to hide our vulnerability, to hide our illness, our age and our seniority, because we fear that they are the precursor to our loss of dignity," the pope said June 1 at his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Square. "Do not hide old age, do not hide the fragility of old age," he said, because society needs to be taught and reformed to respect all seasons of life.
